NXP Sells Crolles Equipment

Eindhoven, 3 December 2007 — NXP Semiconductors, the independent semiconductor company founded by Philips, today announced that it has concluded the sale of its equipment at the Crolles facility. The equipment mainly includes tools for research & development and pilot manufacturing. Ownership of the equipment will be transferred on December 31, 2007 and June 30, 2008 in line with payments made to NXP on these dates. Further details of the transaction were not disclosed.

The sale of equipment follows NXP's announcement on January 16 this year that it will not extend its current cooperation in the Crolles2 Alliance beyond the term expiring at the end of 2007. NXP has decided to pursue a different path for its future development of process technology.

CORPORATE NEWS FROM NXP

Management Changes at NXP

Eindhoven, The Netherlands, December 4, 2007 — NXP Semiconductors, the independent semiconductor company founded by Philips, today announced changes to its Executive Management Team that will become effective January 1, 2008.

- Ajit Manocha, currently Chief Manufacturing Officer, has decided, for personal reasons, to return to the US and relinquish his role at NXP. Ajit will take up a new position externally but will continue to support NXP as an industrial and strategy advisor in areas such as the execution of its asset light manufacturing strategy.
- Hein van der Zeeuw, currently head of the Multimarket Semiconductors Business Unit, will assume the new role of Chief Operations with responsibility for integral supply chain management, purchasing, front- and back-end manufacturing and business excellence. Hein will also continue to act as chairman of NXP's Business Renewal council.
- Replacing Hein van der Zeeuw as head of the Multimarket Semiconductors Business Unit will be Alexander Everke, Senior Vice President, who is promoted from his current role as General Manager, Business Line Power Management. Alexander will become an EMT member and will report to NXP Chief Executive Officer, Frans van Houten. He will be based in Eindhoven.

Commenting on the changes, NXP Chief Executive Officer, Frans van Houten, said, "I would like to express my deep gratitude to Ajit for his great leadership of NXP's Integrated Manufacturing Operation over the last 12 years. I am very pleased that Ajit will stay on as an advisor to NXP. I also warmly welcome Alexander Everke to the Executive Management Team of NXP. He takes over a business unit that Hein has led with great aptitude and is a stable and profitable operation, ready to take on new growth opportunities."
